ANNOUNCEMENTS

To help members learn how to use Club Runner to send emails for club business to and among Rotary members, Bob Timmons will be presenting a Zoom session to learn how to do this.

Ken Galloway reported that Bear’ly Open will be held this year. A video gala will be held on February 5 and on February 5th and 6th a golf course will be set up on the lake.
Tee times will be available for a fee. Ken is looking for volunteers – to be on the planning committee, to be a sponsor, and to donate money to cover costs. He reminded us that this is the Food Shelf’s primary fundraiser.

Ann Frisch reported that as a follow up to our meeting with the Ekaterinburg Rotary, interest was expressed in getting together by Zoom to cook. Let Ann know if you are interested.

Chuck Sandstrom welcomed Julie Honsa as a new member of White Bear Rotary. Julie works in the family business, Honsa Funeral Home.

EQUITY & INCLUSION TEAM

“Most people are still making up their minds if they want to do the work of equity... They want to spend more time listening to views on it than actually getting something accomplished.”

“Our work at Justice Informed is not to make things more possible in the world, it is to make them more probable...It has always been possible for a Black man to be president of the United States, but until 2008, it was improbable.”

- Chicago Rotarian Xavier Ramey (speaker at 2018 Rotary International Convention in Toronto), from an article in November 2020 issue of Rotary magazine.

Program: Gabrielle Clowdus, A Community First Approach to Homelessness

Gabrielle is a research fellow for the UM. Three years ago she was pursuing a doctorate at the University of Minnesota with a focus on international poverty when an adviser told her about the la-ments of a hospital CEO who said people were being sheltered and fed in the emergency room to the tune of $1,500 a night. She knew there had to be a better way, so she shifted her research and a few years ago co-founded Settled, a Twin Cities-based nonprofit she hopes will help get people off the streets through an unusual — but untested — approach. Building expensive apartments wasn't going to solve the problem. So she visited communities across the country where less-expensive "tiny houses," which are typically less than a couple of hundred square feet, are being used to house the homeless to find out what worked and what didn't. Community First village in Texas was one of the first with this concept. That model, while more affordable than most site-built housing, has several challenges. In most states and municipalities, such tiny houses are considered recreational vehicles, not permanent homes, and most are far smaller than most residential zoning codes allow. A breakthrough came in the fall of 2018 when she met Anne Franz, a former Twin Cities business executive and consultant who had been struggling to reconcile what she saw at her church and others. These congregations owned sprawling buildings and grounds that were rarely used, but often swimming in debt. She found it troubling to see donations being used to pay interest on debt for underused buildings. Franz channeled that frustration into an effort to build a business aimed at helping congregations maximize the use of tax-exempt church-owned property, which is governed by the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA), a federal law that offers religious institutions protections from certain laws that govern local land-use regulations. The community-first focus of Settle dovetails perfectly with the socially minded goals of many congregations, so with others, Gabrielle developed a plan to put tiny houses on church-owned land where members could provide support services — and a sense of community — to residents in what they call Sacred Settlements. One of the first settlements will be at a church in Forest Lake.
